EXPERIENCE

Chambers and Partners noted Mark as “Incredibly intelligent and brilliant in an understated way as he has it all carefully figured out. He's very analytical and he will fight fiercely for the client even when you know all the odds are against you.”

Mark’s client focused approach separates himself from other silks. Mark is a charming and subtle advocate who also can deliver excellent client care. He has a genuine interest in his clients and works tirelessly to advance the best possible case for them. He has a reputation for being a trusted advocate - both to solicitors and judges - and for providing insightful and carefully analysed arguments. His approachable and calm advocacy style greatly suits his clients in public child law and has enabled him to gain the trust of those clients he represents who are in the most difficult of personal situations.

Mark comes from a background in mixed common law and has specialised solely in family law for the last 12 years, before being appointed KC in 2017. His practice includes the most complex of cases, including those involving severe injuries, international movement of children and abduction, and BIIIR.

He regularly appears at all levels of court, including the Supreme Court and Court of Appeal, on landmark cases that become leading authorities in their areas. His recent cases include:

- A High Court case, pursuing grave findings on behalf of one of the two applicant Local Authorities, involving three parents and three guardians in a case relating to incest, sexual abuse, and international child trafficking
- Child trafficking in care proceedings, looking at conflict before child trafficking regulations and the obligations arising under BIIIR, and the issue of habitual residence
- A BIIIR case, addressing the correct approach to applications made under Article 15 and involving the issue of international adoption rights in the UK, in particular the adoption of foreign nationals—do UK courts have the right to order the adoption of the children of foreign nationals against the parents' wishes?
- Cases of inflicted or accidental injuries, most recently one involving the poisoning of a child by salt
- The correct approach, decided on appeal, to be taken to assessments of parents under section 38 [6] Children Act 1989
- A Court of Appeal case relating to the Possession Order made following domestic violence in the family home.

Mark is a leader in the field of family law. He was awarded Silk of the Year at the 2021 Legal 500 Awards. He holds high level appointments in the family law community and frequently delivers training or commentary on contemporary issues in Adoption, Contempt of Court, BIIIR and Abduction, including to the Local Government Lawyers Association, the ALC, to solicitors and within Chambers.

He is interviewed regularly by the BBC in relation to legal issues concerning children.

TESTIMONIALS

'Thank you to Mr. Twomey - he was brilliant.' - private client solicitor

'Very grateful for Mark's excellent advice and representation' - local authority solicitor

'We have felt so very well supported by your excellent representation, your position statements have always clearly reflected our view and approach and you could easily sense the mutual respect between yourself and the Judge, which I know has contributed positively to this outcome as she has trusted that whatever position you put forward on behalf of the LA, it was well thought through and thoroughly analysed. I felt you have been a great advocate for us, keeping a calm approach during the hearings which gave myself and my team great reassurance.' - local authority solicitor
