EXPERIENCE

In public law Rosina acts for local authorities, parents, grandparents, children's guardians, and separate representation of competent children. Her public law work practice involves cases involving serious injury, sexual, physical, and emotional abuse, drug and alcohol misuse, neglect, forced marriage and honour-based violence, mental health, cases where there are concurrent criminal proceedings, placement of children abroad and adoption.

She deals sensitively with vulnerable clients and in dealing with cases that have cultural and religious considerations. She is skilful and sensitive to client needs across a wide variety of backgrounds.

In private law Rosina is regularly instructed to act for Rule 16.4 Guardians often in difficult, high conflict and intractable cases. These cases often involve allegations of serious abuse and hostility/parental alienation, and she has extensive experience undertaking fact finding hearings.

Rosina acts for parents, grandparents, and carers in relation to all aspects of private law children cases. Her international children law work involves child abduction, Hague and Non-Hague cases and proposed relocation from the jurisdiction. Rosina also undertakes work in relation to family law act injunctions and domestic abuse.

Before coming to the Bar, Rosina worked in the field of children's rights for leading children's charities and at a law centre. She has been a strong advocate for unaccompanied minors, refugee children and children in care. Rosina also volunteered at Liberty for two years as a researcher on privacy law.
